

GLI

- See't thou yon dreary plain, forlorn and wild,
The feat of desolation, void of light,
Save what the glimmering of these livid flames
Casts pale and dreadful? Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.
The sacred influence
Of light appears, and from the walls of heav'n
Shoots far into the bosom of dim night
A glimmering dawn. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.
Through these sad shades this chaos in my soul,
Some seeds of light at length began to roll;
The rising motion of an infant ray Shot glimmering through the cloud, and promis'd day. Prior.
O'er by the winds, extinct the signal lies;
Or smother'd in the glimmering focket dies. Gay's Trivia.
When rosy morning glimmer'd o'er the dales,
He drove to pasture all the luffy males. Pope's Odyssey.
2. To be perceived imperfectly; to appear faintly.
On the way the baggage post-boy, who had been at court, got a glimmering who they were. Wotton.
The Pagan priesthood was always in the druids; and there was a perceivable glimmering of the Jewish rites in it, though much corrupted. Swift.
GLIMMER. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Faint splendour; weak light.
2. A kind of fossil.
The lesser masses that are lodged in sparry and stony bodies, dispersedly, from their shining and glimmering, were an inducement to the writers of fossils to give those bodies the name of mica and glimmer. Woodward on Fossils.
Stones which are composed of plates, that are generally plain and parallel, and that are flexible and elastic: tale, catiliver, or glimmer, of which there are three sorts, the yellow or golden, the white or silvery, and the black. Woodward.
GLIMPSE. n. f. [from glimmen, Dutch, to glow.]
1. A weak faint light.
Such vast room in nature,
Only to shine, yet scarce to contribute
Each orb a glimpse of light, convey'd to far Down to this habitable, which returns Light back to them. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Thousands of things, which now either wholly escape our apprehensions, or, which our short-sighted reason having got some faint glimpse of, we, in the dark, grope after. Locke.
2. A quick flashing light.
Light as the lightning glimpse they ran? Milton's P. Lost.
My thoughtless youth was wing'd with vain desires;
My manhood, long misled by wandering fires,
Follow'd false lights; and when their glimpse was gone,
My pride struck out new spangles of her own. Dryden.
3. Transitory lustre.
If I, celestial fire, in aught
Have serv'd thy will, or gratified thy thought,
One glimpse of glory to my issue give;
Grac'd for the little time he has to live. Dryden's Fables.
4. Short fleeting enjoyment.
If, while this weary'd flesh draws fleeting breath,
Not satisfy'd with life, afraid of death,
If haply be thy will that I should know
Glimpse of delight, or pause from anxious woe;
From now, from instant now, great fire, dispel
The clouds that press my soul. Prior.
5. A short transitory view.
O friends! I hear the tread of nimble feet
Hasting this way, and now by glimpse discern Jethurial, and Zephon, through the shade. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Some he punisheth exemplarily in this world, that we might from thence have a taste or glimpse of his present justice.
Hobbes on Providence.
A man, us'd to such sort of reflections, sees as much at one glimpse as would require a long discourse to lay before another, and make out in one entire and gradual deduction. Locke.
What should I do! while here I was enchain'd,
No glimpse of godlike liberty remain'd. Dryden's Virgil.
6. The exhibition of a faint resemblance.
There is no man hath a virtue that he has not a glimpse of.
Shakespeare's Twelfth Night and Cressida.
To GLISTEN. v. n. [from glittan, German.] To shine; to sparkle with light.
The bleating kind
Eye the bleak heaven, and next the glistering earth,
With looks of dumb despair. Thomson's Winter.
The ladies eyes glistered with pleasure. Richardson's Pamela.
To GLISTER. v. n. [from glittan, German; glisteren, Dutch.] To shine; to be bright.
The wars flame most in Summer, and the helmets glister brightest in the fairest sunshine. Spenser on Ireland.
How he glisters
Through my dark rust! And how his piety Does my deeds make the blacker! Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
'Tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,

GLO

- Than to be perk'd up in a glistering grief,
And wear a golden sorrow. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
The golden sun
Gallops the zodiack in his glistering coach. Shakespeare's
All that glisters is not gold. Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.
You were more the eye and talk
Of the court to-day, than all Else that glister'd in Whitehall. Prior's John's Underworld.
When the sun shone upon the shields of gold and brass, the mountains glistered therewith, and shined like lamps of fire. Mac. vi. 39.
Glister'd in one snake, and into fraud
Led Eve, our credulous mother, to the tree
Of prohibition. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ix.
It consisted not of rubies, yet the small pieces of it were of a pleasant redish colour, and glistered prettily. Bech.
GLISTER. n. f. [from glitter, Latin.] Spherical; round.
CLUSTER.
Now enters Bush with new state airs,
His lordship's premier minister;
And who, in all profound affairs,
Is held as needful as his glister. Swift.
Choler is the natural glister, or one excretion whereby nature excludeth another; which, descending daily unto the bowels, extimulates those parts, and excites them unto expulsion. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 2.
To GLITTER. v. n. [from glitter, Latin.]
1. To shine; to exhibit lustre; to gleam.
Steel globes are more resplendent than the like plates of brass, and so is the glittering of a blade. Bacon's Essay of Reason.
Before the battle joins, from afar
The field yet glitters with the pomp of war. Dryden's Virg.
Scarce hadst thou time t' unsheath thy conquering blade;
It did but glitter, and the rebels fled. Granville.

The youth, whose fortune the vast globe obey'd,
Finding his royal enemy betray'd,
Wept at his fall. Strapp.
Where God declares his intention to give this dominion, it is plain he meant that he would make a species of creatures that should have dominion over the other species of this terrestrial globe. Locke.
3. A sphere in which the various regions of the earth are geographically depicted, or in which the constellations are laid down according to their places in the sky.
The astrologer who spells the stars,
Mistakes his globe, and in her brighter eye
Interprets heaven's physiognomy. Cleaveland.
These are the stars,
But raise thy thought from sense, nor think to find
Such figures there as are in globes design'd. Creech.
4. A body of soldiers drawn into a circle.
Him round
A globe of fiery seraphim inclos'd,
With bright imbracing, and horrent arms. Milton.
GLOBE ANANATH, or EVERLASTING FLOWER. n. f. [from anath, Hebrew, to be everlasting.] The flowers are small, and cut into four segments, which are collected into squamose heads: from each of these scales is produced a single flower: the ovary in the bottom of the flower becomes a roundish crooked seed, contained in a thin pellicule or skin. Miller.

cup of the flower consists of five small leaves of the same colour with the flower. Miller.
GLOBE Thistle. n. f.
It hath the whole appearance of a thistle: the leaves are produced alternately: the florets consist of one leaf, which is divided into five segments, and is hollow, and each single floret has a scaly cup: the flowers are collected into a spherical head, which has the common cup or covering. Miller.
GLOBOSE. adj. [from globus, Latin.] Spherical; round.
Regions, to which
All thy dominion, Adam, is no more Than what this garden is to all the earth,
And all the sea; from one entire globe
Stretch'd into longitude. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. v.
Then form'd the moon
Globe, and every magnitude of stars. Milton's Paradise Lost.
GLOBOSITY. n. f. [from globe.] Sphericity; sphericity.
Why the same eclipse of the sun, which is seen to them that live more easterly, when the sun is elevated six degrees above the horizon, should be seen to them that live one degree more westerly, where the sun is but five degrees above the horizon, and to lower and lower proportionably, 'till at last it appear not at all: no account can be given, but the globosity of the earth.
GLOBOUS. adj. [from globus, Latin.] When the accent is intended to be on the last syllable, the word should be written globe, when on the first globous: I have transferred hither a passage of Milton, in which this rule has been neglected.] Spherical; round.
Wide over all the plain, and wider far
Than all this globe earth in plain outspread,
Such are the courts of God! Milton.
The brazen instruments of death discharge

As I suppose, toward your once glory'd friend,
My son now captive, hither hath inform'd
Your younger feet, while mine cast back with age Came lagging after. Milton's Agamemnon.
GLORIFICATION. n. f. [from glorification, Fr. from glorify.] The act of giving glory.
At opening your eyes, enter upon the day with thanksgiving for the preservation of you the last night, with the glorification of God for the works of the creation. Taylor.
To GLORIFY. v. a. [from glorifier, French; glorifico, Latin.]
1. To procure honour or praise to one.
Two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in. Shakespeare's K. John.
Justice is their virtue: that alone
Makes them fit sure, and glorifies the throne. Daniel.
2. To pay honour or praise in worship.
God is glorified when such his excellency, above all things, is with due admiration acknowledged. Hooker, b. v.
This form and manner of glorifying God was not at that time first begun; but received long before, and alleged at that time as an argument for the truth. Hooker, b. v. f. 42.
Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
That we for thee may glorify the Lord. Shakespeare's Henry VI.
All nations shall glorify thy name. Pf. lxxxvi. 9.
This is the perfection of every thing, to attain its true and proper end; and the end of all these gifts and endowments, which God hath given us, is to glorify the giver. Tillotson.
3. To praise; to honour; to extol.
Whomsoever they find to be most licentious of life, desperate in all parts of disobedience and rebellious disposition, him they set up and glorify. Spenser on Ireland.
